DAWSON COLLEGE TO CLOSE MAY 31

Dawson Calls Protest Meet Over 'Queen'

By ANDRE MATIN
Observers believe that the recent nomination of Fern Scott as the Dawson candidate for the forthcoming McGill Carnival Queen Contest is an outright fake quite on a par with last year's election of glamorous soulful-eyed Betty—who turned out to be a St. Bernard dog of no mean proportions.

However, some individuals at Dawson are working very hard to convince us that the alleged queen does exist.

Last evening, Dave Newman, columnist on the Dawson Weekly declared that Dawson students are planning to hold a protest meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. to discuss what further action can be taken in order for them to show their displeasure at the 'flagrant disregard for Dawson' shown by the Carnival Committee, over the nomination of Fern Scott as a candidate for the title of Queen.

His comment is all the more strange in view of the fact that last evening when the Daily phoned Dawson no one out there appeared to be aware that the alleged protest meeting was to be held.

Furthermore Newman reported that Miss Scott commented on the way that her nomination had been treated as a campus prank at McGill. She said it seemed strange that after being nominated in good faith for the position of Carnival Queen, that the whole affair had been (Continued on Page 4)

Nominations For A & S to Close Feb. 20

Nominations for the executive posts of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society are now being received by Gordon Empey, chief returning officer.

Nominations are being accepted until Monday, Feb. 20. The following positions are to be filled:

Presidents, to be chosen from 3rd year male students in the faculty; 1st vice-president to be selected from co-eds in 2nd year; 2nd vice-president, male student in 2nd year; corresponding secretary, co-ed in 1st year; recording secretary, co-ed in 1st year; treasurer, male from 3rd year.

Elections are scheduled for Wednesday, March 1, and voting will be by secret ballot. Booths will be set up at convenient places, it was reported.

All nomination sheets, according to regulations of the society, must be signed by the nominees and at least 25 members of the society. Nominations may be left at the Tuck Shop or the janitor's office in the Arts Building, or given to Gordon Empey.

A UNIQUE AND SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT in McGill's history comes to an end when Dawson College, shown in the grip of winter, closes May 31. While R.C.A.F. personnel were still at what was formerly No. 9 Air Observers' School, Dawson College opened its doors to veteran students, Sept. 26, 1945. The Daily's Dawson photographer, Gene Lehman, took this aerial shot from a height of 600 feet a couple of days ago. In the foreground is "Lower Slobbovia," so called because of the grim winter walk to the mess hall which is among the main barracks and Dawson Hall at upper left. The gatehouse is approximately in the centre of the picture and the hangars are off to the right. In the background is St. John's with its storied spots which will long remember the spirited Dawsonites who were no ordinary university students.

Dartmouth Students Present Goethe Play

Dartmouth College German Club has been invited to present its production of Goethe's play 'Clavigo' in Moyses Hall, Tuesday Feb. 14 at 8:15 p.m.

Directed by Prof. Stephen J. Schlossmacher the Dartmouth production was first presented at the New Hampshire observance of the Goethe bicentennial on the Dartmouth campus.

The leading female roles will be played by Elizabeth Arntzen and Alwin B. Dudley, while the leading male roles will be filled by four Dartmouth students, George N. Grosshans, Emil L. Frohlich, John A. Hoskins and Erich S. Wisol.

Men Needed To Construct Carnival Slide

Volunteers are urgently needed today to complete work on the toboggan slide for the Winter Carnival. Two shifts of twenty men are required; one shift to meet on the steps of the Arts Building at 10 a.m. and the other at 1 p.m. Each will work for one or two hours.

Election of the Carnival Queen has been postponed for one day until Thursday, Feb. 16, the committee announced.

Governing Institutions in West Indies Discussed

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM

"Will the different governing institutions existing in the West Indies today hinder a possible Federation?"

This was the subject under discussion at the first in a series of study groups conducted by the West Indian Society on Saturday in the Union.

The society on the whole expressed their disapproval of the fact that the Governors in the West Indies could do pretty much what they pleased, and that the motions and bills usually came from the Governor down to the bodies representing the people. In addition they did not like the idea of being ruled by people whom others had appointed. Only three parts of the West Indies have complete adult suffrage and the representatives in the government usually represent one group.

Mr. Kenneth Augier led the group and began his address by outlining briefly the governing institutions in the West Indies. "From semi-independent government to rigid autocracy, followed by a moderate rise back to semi-representative government is the usual pattern in the West Indies," he said.

"Let us begin by looking at Bermuda," said Augier. "The Bermudians, although technically they live in the West Indies, do not consider themselves West Indians. Bermuda now has a House of Assembly, which is fully elected, and a Legislative Council, which is partly nominated and partly elected. But, a balance exists between the nominated and elected members with the Governor having a deciding vote.

"The situation in the Bahamas is much the same, with one interesting exception, the members of the House of Assembly are elected for a period of seven years. This is a considerable length of time for a country to go before re-election. The Legislative Council is fully nominated by the Governor. The Bahamas have always aspired to a possible union with the Dominion of Canada.

"In Jamaica we find a new pattern, a pattern of nearly semi-independence. In the Legislative Council the majority of the members elected, but the real governing body is the Executive Council which is picked by the Governor. Their job is to advise the Governor but he does not necessarily have to accept their advice. In 1944 the House of Assembly, became fully elected and the Legislative Council became balanced with 5 nominated and 5 elected members, but the Governor still has emergency powers.

"In the Executive Council of Barbados, the party in power has a working majority, while the House of Assembly is fully elected."

Hillel Clubs to Hold Joint Party Tuesday

Dawson's annual Hillel party is to be held on February 14 at MacDonald College, in conjunction with the MacDonald Hillel.

All Dawson members who have not registered for this event are asked to contact Lou Naturnan in building 29, room 25, as soon as possible.

Despite the fact that Rabbi Cass was unable to attend last week, a regular meeting of the Dawson branch of Hillel was held.

Co-Eds to Receive Golf Instruction

McGill co-eds will be given an opportunity to receive professional coaching in golf, it was announced recently by Miss W. Wood, of the Women's Department of Physical Education.

Beginning Feb. 20th, a special course in golf instruction for beginners and golfers will be given at a city golf school located a short distance from the campus.

The instruction periods will be conducted for three weeks every Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. Accommodations are limited to 20 girls so Miss Wood has asked those interested to register at the Physical Education Office of Royal Victoria College before Thursday, Feb. 18th.

Each girl who registers for the instruction must guarantee that she will attend at least twice a week and have a total of six lessons. This precaution is to ensure that the girls registering are really interested. The professional instructor who will conduct the course wants to concentrate on those who are keen to learn.

Would-be golfers may use their own clubs, but those who do not possess clubs may obtain them at the golf school. Flat rubber-soled shoes should be worn. The course is free for co-eds. Golf balls are supplied.

The instructor is particularly interested in having beginners take the course as well as girls who have had some golfing experience. If sufficient interest is shown in the golf course, an additional course will be considered for the following three weeks. Conflict in lecture schedules may be arranged if students interested in taking the course will discuss possible time schedules with the Physical Education Department.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

The McGill White team maintained their winning streak against the MacDonald cagettes in the return match last Saturday at St. Annes by a score of 48-21. The Green and Gold opened the scoring and led by Barbara Norris, had eight points to their credit in a short time. Then the McGill team started to click and really went (Continued on Page 4)

James Recalls High Points In College's 5-Year History

Fact, Legend From Part Of History

By PETER MATHEWS

Recollections of an eventful five years of Dawson College history will be renewed with the news that the location is to be abandoned by the University this spring. Some 5,600 students, who at one time or other formed part and parcel of the institution, and shared the long meal queues, ferocious floor hockey games, and dormitory water fights will also look back with regret to the comradery which is the keynote of Dawson.

There was no tradition to bind the group that formed the first year classes in September of '45. They were to create a history of their own.

The Royal Canadian Air Force had not completely vacated the location on September 28, 1945, and the sharp-pitched siren which is today perched atop Dawson Hall and serves to awaken slumbering students, is a reminder of the location's former history with the armed forces.

New academic standards were established by the men that moved into Dawson, but it was an atmosphere of both work and play which dominated the atmosphere. Many a legend was to survive long after the sight was to be abandoned.

Use of extinguishers in long drawn water fights formed part of dormitory life. There is the story of the Vice Principal who walked into one building to be greeted by a blast of both water and curses. When mistaken identities had been straightened out, the college official, despite the soaking his clothes took, did not have his enthusiasm dampened and forgot the whole matter.

Trips to nearby St. John's by the Dawson-colored Boulais buses, also form part of the Dawson Story. There is a legend woven around a professor with a thirst for more than knowledge, who upon return from the 'outside world' one night, chopped down a flagpole—one of the landmarks around Dawson Hall. Some students even wandered to nearby Iberville, and there is one story of a student who swam the icy waters of the Richelieu River one November on the dare of a cohort, and the additional inducement of a $25 dollar bet.

The flatlands surrounding the college have produced winds and gales which Dawsonites claim to be beyond comparison anywhere in the world. One snowstorm in the winter of 1946 cut off some 300 students from the mother campus, in nearby St. John's. Ingenious students were to be found lodged in every corner of the town that night, from police stations to pool halls to hotels.

Dawson sports have always been one of the main activities of students. Starting with little but the enthusiasm of Dawsonites, Athletics Director Em Orlick built team after team of championship calibre. An inclusive intramural program featured a sport which was to become the national game of Dawson—floor hockey. Many is the packed gymnasium which watched teams with names like "Alkies," "Gremilins," "Moyse Boys," and "Virginians." The mention of these names today will often elicit long tales by alumni of Dawson.

The keynote of Dawson history, however, has been one of comradery. The long barrier at the Dawson gatehouse will fall to keep out memories of the college, long after it has been abandoned.

LECTURES CANCELLED

All lectures and laboratory periods, except those in the third and fourth year of the Medical course, will be cancelled on Wednesday, 15th February, from 12:00 noon until 2:00 p.m., to permit students to attend a meeting of the Students' Society, an announcement from the Registrar's office stated.

'Most Daring Thing McGill Has Ever Done' — Hatcher

By JOHN SCOTT

Dawson College—"the most daring thing McGill has ever done"—will close down May 31.

Officials announcement of the closing, rumoured for weeks both here and at St. John's, came last night from Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor, on behalf of the Board of Governors.

Dr. James declared that after careful exploration of the whole situation arrangements are being made to accommodate students, who would normally have proceeded to the former air force station, on the Montreal campus for the 1950-51 session.

In making the announcement, the principal recalled several high-points of Dawson's "brief, but vivid, history." It was late in September, 1945, after the sudden end of the war with Japan, that it became apparent that there would be hundreds of veterans seeking immediate admission to Canadian universities, he noted.

Since the Board of Governors had decided that at all costs McGill would provide an adequate education for these men, and would give them priority over all others, the decision to take over from the Government the buildings of No. 9 Air Observer School at St. John's was announced on Sept. 20. Six days later, Sept. 26, Dawson College opened its doors to nearly 600 engineering and science students.

Outstanding Contribution to University

Dr. James added that the record of McGill in providing for students who returned from service in the armed forces in the years from 1945 would remain one of the proudest in its long history.

These veterans in their turn had made an outstanding contribution to the university by their maturity of outlook, industry and scholarship and had been a steady and unifying influence among the student body as a whole.

Announcement of the closing to Dawson students was to be made at breakfast this morning by Dr. W. H. Hatcher, vice-principal of the St. John's branch. Although a varied reaction from the student body is expected, Dr. Hatcher told The Daily last night "there will be a terrific amount of sadness."

Recalling the establishment of Dawson in 1945 when he was assistant dean of Arts and Science—and thus the man who had to cope with hectic registration problems—Dr. Hatcher said "it was the most daring thing McGill has ever done. It was conceived and carried out in two weeks."

Dr. Hatcher said he heard a student recently describe Dawson as unique, in that "it is just one, big fraternity." Referring to the remarkable esprit de corps that binds Dawsonites together, he commented: "They're a grand bunch, actually."

"No Immediate Plans"

Contacted by The Daily in Ottawa last night, Defence Minister Brooke Claxton, declined comment on the Government's future plans for the former air force base. "Ar-

Now in retirement, she spends her time giving counsel and guidance to any Dawsonite needing it. Her wide range of experience, gained during her eventful reign, has well prepared her for her present position.

LOWER SLOBBOVIA was home to thousands of veteran students who dressed approximately for that isolated corner of McGill's distant annex, Dawson College. With the wind whipping sharp powder snow across the flat Eastern Townships area, it was a long, bitterly cold trip to the mess hall and the classrooms.

DAWSON CLOSES

"The most daring thing McGill has ever done", as Vice-Principal W. H. Hatcher termed Dawson College last night, comes to an end May 31 with a proud record of achievement behind it. Nearly six thousand students, most of them veterans, have passed through this unique college since it opened in September 26, 1945. Determined to provide the opportunity for a university education to every veteran who applied, the administration authorities had laid plans before the end of the war to accommodate the vets. But the problem of adequate buildings seemed impossible to solve. Within two weeks Principle F. Cyril James had conceived the idea of taking over No. 9 Air Observer School near St. Johns and had put the plan into action. The plan matured so swiftly that there were not enough knives and forks on hand in the mess hall when the first students arrived. Thousands of veterans who would otherwise have been unable to enter university for some time were thus admitted. Though they had long looked forward to a chance to get away from barracks life, the vets realized they had been given a special opportunity through the foresight of the university authorities and the magnificent government rehabilitation plan. In his statement last night Principal James paid tribute to the veterans who "made an outstanding contribution to the university by their maturity of outlook, industry and scholarship."

SPRIT OF DAWSON WAS ONE OF UNITY

By JIM ROSS

"I feel that a fine chapter in McGill University will be ended when the doors of Dawson close", confided Reverend E. C. Knowles, Student Counsellor, to our questions. "But it will never be forgotten by those of us who were fortunate in taking part in its curriculum." Rev. Knowles arrived at Dawson in June, 1946 and discovered that out of 1700 students, 1200 were veterans. "I must admit", he asserted, "I was expecting a cliquish spirit amongst the veterans who had been out of contact with civilian education for about five years, and were from six to ten years older than the average high school graduate. Much to their credit, however, they became fully integrated with the other students, and the spirit at Dawson was one of unity." When questioned on the difference between the life in barracks and the life at Dawson in the terms of a residential college he told us of a student who had formerly held a high rank and was well disciplined in army routine. "Sir", the student asked, "what time do I have to report in?" He had to be assured that there was no compulsion, and regulations were reduced to a minimum. "All the same", Rev. Knowles continued, "these men had a good idea of what was at stake, and they applied themselves diligently to their work." He was very cautious in outlining the differences in the life at Dawson with the life at McGill. "I feel that the greatest single advantage of Dawson over McGill is the general camaraderie there. In a residential college, friendships are made more easily because the students eat, go to lectures, study, play, and become more interested in one another. Furthermore, this same principle applies to professor-student relations. There is much more personal tuition and friendly guidance." "But", he wished to point out, "it is all relative. The students at McGill, especially those who live in Montreal, have their own personal attachments and friends built up through their life at home. The one is probably in proportion to the other." "The buildings in Dawson" he replied to our queries, "are in tolerably good shape considering what they were built for, and the length of time they are up. Of course", he smiled and added, "some of the line-ups for meals border on the fabulous. I saw a weary, unshaven student waiting at the end of a long line and jokingly told him that he was going to be awfully late for lunch. 'Lunch', the student sighed, 'I'm still waiting for my breakfast.'"

The Story Behind Canada's Leading Poet

By James Robb

Literature has always been noted for the "characters" that have added to its stature down through the ages. They appear to our minds as students in the dens of Paris, or be ordered patriarchs casting cynical remarks out at the world — something heard about but rather beyond our experience. It is interesting to know that, without realizing it, Canada during the last generation has developed such a literary character of its own. He is Edward John Pratt, at present Professor of English at Victoria College, Toronto, and generally recognized as Canada's leading poet. Ned Pratt is the kind of man who makes a purely facts and figures biography almost impossible. In his succession of jobs — including such widely separated ones as preacher and patent medicine promoter — stories based on his humorous sayings and practicality have grown up, so that now, even if he had never written a line of poetry, the tale of his life would be worth hearing. This practical sense in Pratt had some basis. When you were born in 1883 one of eight in a Methodist minister's family on the east coast of Newfoundland, you had to be practical. At eighteen Pratt left to continue his education at the Methodist College in St. John's, graduating from there as a qualified teacher two years later. During this period of education he came under the tutelage of one R. E. Holloway, whose belief in the great outdoors as a classroom developed Pratt's interest in nature. However, when Pratt tried to apply this philosophy to his own teaching he aroused the ire of the Department of Education by producing a complete crop of failures. Whether or not this changed Pratt's plans again is not known, but during the next three years he changed his ambition from teaching to the ministry, taking up a missionary circuit on the Newfoundland coast preparatory to leaving for Toronto to continue his scholastic career. There was but one hitch in his plans. He lacked financial support. This failed to daunt Ned Pratt—he mixed a brew consisting of spruce buds, cherry bark, and a Methodist's idea of a small amount of rum to keep it from freezing. The brew sold well, and when the bottles began to burst the next winter due to lack of an "anti-freeze", Ned Pratt was on his way to a B.A. in Toronto. His road to a degree was far from easy. It included a variety of summer jobs, all the way from farming to a refreshment concessionaire at a Western Canada fair. He received his B.A. in 1911, and his B.D. in 1913, progressing in 1917 to his Doctor of Philosophy. Possessing a full complement of degrees he gave up his original intention and entered the Department of Psychology at the University of Toronto, soon moving to the Department of English at the insistence of his head, Dr. Pelham Edgar, who noticed some talent in Pratt's first literary effort. 1923 brought his first major published work, a series of poems called "Newfoundland Verse". Since that time Ned Pratt has sent a constant stream into the river of Canadian Literature. His works are highlighted by "The Witches' Brew" in 1925, "Titans" in 1926, "The Roosevelt and the Antioch" in 1930, "The Titanic" in 1935, "Brebeuf and his Brethren" in 1940, and "Dunkirk" in 1940. The producer of these works is a kindly, well-built man of 67, who regards 200 lines of writing a sum-

However, the final decision was based on the teams of four in which the McGill teams placed ninth and eleventh out of seventeen participating teams. The Western teams of four placed first and third. Barbara Stanwyck Fascinating as Thelma Jordan "Holiday Affair" is a Rather Dull Comedy

Thelma Jordan

Paramount's latest entry in the melodramatic sweepstakes is an interesting affair that is tailor-made for the dramatic ability of Barbara Stanwyck. Director Robert Siodmak, that eminent master of suspense, has come up with a tingling tale that makes up in performances and production what it lacks in originality. You've probably heard this one before. Miss Stanwyck plays the title role, that of a mysterious society woman who becomes involved with an assistant D. A., a husband and father to boot. When her wealthy aunt is murdered, Thelma Jordan is charged with the deed. The lawyer, however, assumes the position of state prosecutor at the trial, and he sees to it that the accused woman is acquitted. But Thelma Jordan is a vicious girl. She walks out on the fellow, shouting to his bewildered face that he has been a "fall guy" all along. It would be unfair to tell the ending.

The production is all that can be expected with such material. The settings are excellent, and the photography and the music are first rate. Mr. Siodmak has done a masterful directing job, especially in the courtroom scenes which are at once intelligent and exciting and often remarkable. The performances are, perhaps, the film's greatest asset. Miss Stanwyck has been through all this before and she is completely fascinating as a woman who can never make up her mind. Wendell Corey is equally good as the lawyer, and the supporting cast headed by Joan Tetzel and Paul Kelly is perfect. All in all, "Thelma Jordan" stocks up as a generally satisfying thriller.

Sociologists To Plan Symposium on Values

Plans for a large symposium on the subject of "Values in Modern Life" will be discussed at a regular meeting of the Sociological and Anthropological Society tomorrow in Room 34 of the Arts building.

The symposium is the largest views event sponsored by the society each year. An effort has been made to choose a topic which will provide interest and scope for the various departmental student clubs on the campus. Invitation will be extended to these clubs to attend the symposium and present their views.

Letters to the Editor

NOT THE ONLY DEFENDER

Editor, The Daily:
Mr. Crusch has set me a very difficult task if I am to answer his contribution. For he has not attacked my opinions, but rather my character and the strength of my faith. To reply is particularly difficult, since no Christian, if he is a true follower of Christ, is unconscious of the gap between what he is and what he should be. Moreover it is obviously absurd to "witness to myself" by protesting that I am not emotionally insecure. Hence I'm afraid we shall have to leave it to God to judge in regard to that question.

There is one point, however, that I can perhaps clear up. Mr. Crusch's case against me seems to rest on the assertion that I am defending Communism, which he considers a terrible thing for a Christian to do. If, by stating that in Communist philosophy there is a drive for social justice and equality, I am defending Communism, then I am not the only such defender. Many of our leading Churchmen, including the late Archbishop Temple and Dr. Karl Barth, have made statements of similar import.

I hope that Mr. Crusch will not now proceed to attribute feelings of insecurity to these outstanding spiritual leaders of our time, while judging Mr. Duplessis a better champion of democracy and freedom than they. If so may I beg to disagree and to hope that having done so I will not once more be accused of adopting this attitude because of a "clamour for recognition."

McGill Shaded 46-45 in Cage Contest at Kingston

MacLellan Terrific But Redmen Beaten By Toronto Varsity

By Frank Shamy

(Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10, 1950). The phenomenal goal-tending of McGill's Bob MacLellan beat everything except Lady Luck tonight in Varsity Arena where the Redmen, after having taken a second period 1-0 lead, succumbed to a sustained University of Toronto attack and eventually went down to a 3-1 defeat at the hands of a hungry Varsity crew.

The win moved the Blues into a first place tie with the U. of Toronto, Carabins who, however, hold a game advantage over the Torontonians.

Led by the brilliant rushing of centre Cec Turcott, the Varsity squad had a decided edge over the Torontonians.

Inters Split In Double Weekend Bill

By Jack Rabinovitch

Displaying superb basketball craftsmanship McGill's Intermediate basketball Braves handed a not too competent Royal Military College cage quintet a resounding 57-10 trouncing.

The Manny Schacter coached crew played a man to man defense and on the offensive short passes and accurate shooting were the order for the night. The R. M. C. squad played from a zone for the entire first half and it wasn't until midway through the second frame that they finally switched to a man to man defense.

Shea and Siemers, two former Dawson stars, were the big guns for the night, each sinking eleven points, while Jerry "Tex" Conger and Jack Kurtz played their best games of the season. The whole team made the scoring column.

The first half started with Shea scoring the first four points; two on free shot throws. From then on, the McGill boys were never headed. It was not until the twelve minute mark that Lundell of R. M. C. scored a free shot for R.M.C.'s first point. The score was then 15-2. At half-time, the Braves were on the heavy end of a 26-4 score.

The second frame proved to be no different than the previous one. The little Redmen racked up fourteen points without an answer before Ross of R.M.C. scored a free throw. After six minutes of play, the score was 40-6. McGill's favor, the Braves did not once let up during this frame and the game ended with McGill ahead by a tremendous margin, 57-10.

Showing a complete reversal of form in the first half of the contest, from their R.M.C. game, McGill's Intermediate basketball Braves dropped a 37-32 decision to a powerful Queen's Intermediate team, Saturday night.

The Braves came back in the second frame to play inspired ball and at one time were within two points of the Tricolored squad, but they could not keep up the gruelling pace, and when they slowed down, Queen's were quick to take advantage of it.

The first half started off at a fast clip with both teams checking close. The Tricolored squad used the fast break to advantage and at the three minute mark held a commanding 10-1 lead.

The Braves passing was poor and their shooting inaccurate. They could not get started and were checked in their own zone. Their offense was weak and try as they would, they could not get a real attack going. The half ended with Queen's on top of a 23-10 count.

After a fiery half time pep talk by coach Manny Schacter, the Red Intermediate Squad came back to play driving ball. The half started off with both teams checking close. McGill started to make their passes sure and the increasing accuracy of their shots narrowed the Queen's lead.

Two picture baskets by Berger and Thomas put McGill within two points of the Tricolored squad, but the pace was beginning to tell on the McGill boys. Before replacements could be sent in, the Golden Squad had scored two more baskets and the final score was 37-32 for Queen's. McGill was without the services of Elie Godel, who had sprained his ankle the previous night and his absence was felt by the squad. Feeday, Welton, and Phillips played outstanding games for the winners, while Berges, Pye, Siemers, and Shea turned in stalwart efforts.

Swimmers Defeat R.P.I. To Break Losing Streak

By RUBE BRESSLER

The Red Mermen defeated R.P.I. on Saturday afternoon at the Canadian Legion Pool by a 39-36 score. This was the first win for McGill in four meetings with the Engineers from Troy, New York, and broke a losing streak of four for Vic Curran's squad.

The McGill team won five of the nine events of the dual meet. The 300 - yard Medley relay trio of Peter Mingle, Irwin Kopin, and Norm Ashton sped to a meet opening win and a 5-0 lead. The 220-yard, free-style, saw Redlick of the Engineers slave off a strong finish by McGill's Pete Issenman to gain first. Issenman and Greg Titus followed him.

Jim Quayle flashed to a half-line-win over Fishman of R.P.I. in the 50 yard sprint. This was the closest race of the meet and marked another gratifying performance by Vic Curran's sprint ace. Quayle has come into his own in the last two meets and looks like a good bet to retain his C.I.A.U. 50-yard title.

The present McGill squad's unimpressive record is not a true indication of its ability. It is a squad which is definitely superior to last year's team which posted a 8-2 record. The performance times are better, but the opposition was tougher. The meet against Toronto on Feb. 25 should show the improvement wrought by competition. The outlook for a second C.I.A.U. swim crown for Vic Curran is not too dim.

CIAU Rules Body Declines To Make Proposals Public

A 'request for more blocking' and a 'modification of the passing rules to facilitate the use of the forward pass' were the most definite statements that could be obtained from official spokesmen following Saturday's CIAU football rules committee conference.

The proposals of the conference will be made public on Feb. 25 in Toronto when they are presented to the Canadian Rugby Union for official action. In addition to the changes suggested by the CIAU other members unions such as the ORFU, QUREU, Big Four, and the Western Interprovincial Union will be presented.

Vic Obeck and Ron Perowne represented McGill, Warren Stevens and Dr. Al Williams, Toronto Varsity, Frank Little, Western and Dr. Harry Batsone, Queen's. Bastone was elected president, succeeding Perowne. Bob Masterston and Johnny Metras were unable to attend the meeting as both had squads playing basketball.

The 100-yard backstroke was an easy win for the dynamic duo of Mingle and Merrow who took it easy for a one-two finish. Merrow was being held for the 400-yard free-style, while Mingle was being saved for the anchor spot on the 200-yard relay quartet. Curran knew they could win with a minimum of effort so he held them in check. The score was 25-25 at the conclusion of the backstroke success.

The Red Seahorse broke the tie, and the Quebec 200-yard breaststroke record by easily winning in 2:31.1. Kopin held the old record also. Gusta Sperling came third behind Gallager of R.P.I. and McGill led 31-28.

Then came Adin Merrow and the strategy of saving him. A one-two 440 win meant victory in the meet regardless of who got the seven points for the final 200-yard free-style relay. Merrow took an early lead and won the race. Greg Titus outswam Curtis of R.P.I. and took second. These all-important eight points gave McGill a 39-29 lead and victory. Had either Greg or Adin failed to deliver, the meet would have been decided by the 200-yard free-style relay... which we lost.

Mermaids Win Swim Meet Over Carleton

By HELEN RHODA HARRIS

The McGill Mermaids downed the Carleton College co-eds by a score of 34-33 last Saturday afternoon at the Community Hall pool, in a battle that had the two teams exchanging the lead alternately throughout the meet.

Audrey Wipper, placing first in the 50 yard backstroke and second in the 50 yard freestyle events, was high scorer with 8 points. Three Ottawa girls, Walker, Reade, and Rankin, all tied for their team's top honours, each receiving 6 points. McGill's Joan Croll, the team's manager, and Margot Seagram also displayed fine style, and emerged as victors in their respective races.

The Red and White dancing swimming duo of Hood and Holden performed their synchronized routine which earned them third place in the intercollegiate meet last December in Hamilton.

The 25 yard comedy race proved to be very amusing. Each swimmer swam with a lighted candle in one hand. If the flame was extinguished, she had to swim over to the side of the pool and have it relit. The girls appeared remarkably

Director Ryan Gives Golfers Practice Time

By Bob Hall

Those who are interested in the Royal and Ancient pastime of Golf, have been given another break by McGill's affable Director of Intramural Athletics, Howie Ryan. Mr. Ryan announced this morning that ample room will be provided in the Rifle Room at the gym for those who would like to practice during the off season.

The balls will be driven off coconuts into a weighted canvas which when not in use can be rolled up to the ceiling. The room has been made available for practice anytime between 12 and 2 o'clock, and the key is available at Mr. Ryan's office.

This ability to practice during the winter months, should be a great asset to those who don't get into form until mid-summer. For as previously announced a new try out will be held to determine the four men who will represent McGill in the spring when Dartmouth College visits us for our annual tournament.

Coupled with this is the fact that many average golfers who, due to summer employment, are not able to play as much as desired, will be able to improve with the many practice sessions they can get in before the summer months roll around.

Thus another Intramural activity has been added to the list of an ever increasing sports program here at McGill.

Anyone requiring further information may get in touch with Mr. Ryan or the golf manager, Bob Hall.

Finlayson Leading Scorer In Hard Fought Encounter Marred by Arguments

By JACK RABINOVITCH

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 12. — McGill's senior basketball team was edged out 46-45 by a driving Queen's team last night, in a hard and bitterly fought contest that was marked by debatable officiating.

Mentor Moe's Redmen picked up an early lead and after four minutes of play were leading 9-4. From then on the Redmen were never headed until the final minutes of the game, when the Golden Gaels forged ahead to eke out a slim win.

Foul shots played a major role in the game with Queen's being awarded the majority of the free throws.

The game opened up with Fraser being fouled and scoring his free throw, but MacNiveau countered for the Gaels and then sank a basket. Then McGill started to roll, two baskets apiece by Bloom and Finlayson, succeeded by hoop swishers by Endman and Fraser, which made the score 13-3 for McGill.

The remainder of the first half was even, with both teams scoring equally, and the half ended with the Hermen on top of a 27-18 score.

The second frame opened with Fraser scoring the opening basket, but then the tricolored squad began to drive. Baskets by Lampman and Souter narrowed the McGill margin. The play continued at a gruelling pace that had the crowd of 1,500 yelling their throats raw, as both teams missed golden scoring opportunities.

At the three-quarter mark the McGill lead had been narrowed down to two points; score 36-34. Play continued at the same killing pace and it was two quick baskets by Lampman and Elford that put the Golden quintet ahead 44-43. Lampman then added another score, making it 46-43.

With less than a minute left to play, Don Finlayson was awarded two free throws and he sank both. McGill took the ball out at mid-court and peppered the basket in vain attempts. Two shots by Mike Bloom rimmed the hoop as defending Queen hands ripped at the netting. But the two referees seem-

THE MOST DARING thing McGill has ever done, was the way Vice-Principal W. H. Hatcher last night described Dawson College, shown in the R.C.A.F. photo taken when it was a busy air training centre. The idea of taking over No. 9 Air Observer School was conceived and carried out within two weeks in September, 1945, and made it possible for McGill to set a proud record of accepting every veteran who applied for admission. The twin engine Ansons used for air navigation training are shown on the tarmac in front of the hangars

Veterans' Memories Remain From Dawson's Brief Life

By BORIS GARDAVSKY

(Former Dawson Weekly Editor)

Dawson College is a child of the last war and like everything else that sprang from such seeds it grew so quickly that it almost burst. In 1945, the veterans poured into the air force station which was to be named Dawson College, looking for an education and a training.

As students they quickly developed an active interest in activities outside of the classroom. A students' society was established with an executive council similar to that at McGill. Under the energetic guidance of Em Orlick, athletics mushroomed and have ever since played a major role on the campus drawing more students than any other activity.

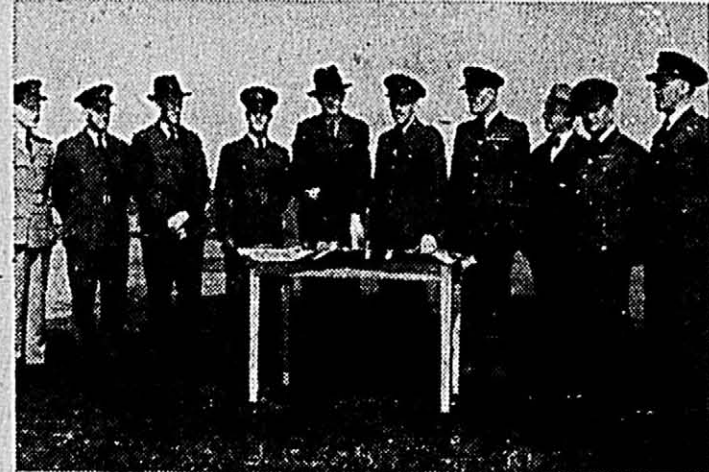

The veterans soon took charge and under their experienced guidance, the students' society and its many activities stumbled through its growing pains. By 1947, there were more than two thousand students enrolled at Dawson.

But by the autumn of 1947, student interest had taken an apathetic turn and, unnoticed in the turmoil, was a steadily mounting debt which had already absorbed a $7,000 surplus from the year before.

MISMANAGEMENT OF WEEKLY
The new president, elected in 1948, was immediately confronted with yet another problem, the Dawson Weekly which under mismanagement had become the mouthpiece of those interested in only their own ends. The situation became so serious that after a deliberate violation of the neutrality of the paper during an election, the editor was discharged by the Council and barred from student activity for six months.

The Weekly was then reorganized under separate management and a new editor appointed, which was myself. Reorganization was none too soon for the end of the year proved that Dawson had incurred a debt of $12,000, a staggering blow for an already buffeted council.

The following year, the Dawson Weekly played a major role in bringing to the Dawson student body the seriousness of the debt. At the beginning of the college year in 1948, the Dawson Weekly struggled with a small staff of little more than five students to come out once a week. By the end of the year, however, over thirty students, all originally inexperienced in newspaper work, were turning out a paper which had become a major influence on the campus in bringing to the student body the activities of the council and the various campus clubs.

THE TRANSFER IN 1945 of Dawson College by the Royal Canadian Air Force, took place on September 26. Present at these ceremonies were W.C. J. M. Vian, D.F.C.; W.C. A. E. Annetts; the school's first vice-principal, A. H. S. Gillson; F.L. R. D. Albert; Principal James; S.L. W. T. Dalton; S.L. J. H. Goodall; Mr. W. Bentley; F.L. L. J. Riddell; and F.L. J. O. Hutton.

In that year, 1948-49, a very closely knit council was elected which through the energy and enthusiasm of its members provided one of the most active years on the Dawson campus and still managed to repay over $7,000 of its debt.

That was the year Dawsonites were able to enjoy regular 35 mm. movies twice a week for 20c admission. That was the year that Dawson had its own banquets and awards, the year when Dawson extended its activities beyond the confines of its own campus by co-ordinating with Macdonald College for a Choral Concert and council meeting. That was the year Betty was nominated Carnival Queen. And the Dawson Weekly reported it.

When it came to vital statistics, Betty won, even though some questioned her feminine pulchritude.

This year itself proved a challenge to the student body. With decreased enrolment, the remaining debt of the college became a major problem but through the efforts of a responsible council, it will yet be resolved by April. Some activities have suffered for lack of funds but support from the two undergraduate bodies on the Dawson campus has offset this considerably. Now, as Dawson's end draws near, all this pales into memories but Dawson and its meaning to those who lived and worked there will never pass.

In the third quarter the forward line of Molly Camp, Pat Griffiths, and Chuckie Christensen kept control of the play with the help of guards Isabel Irwin, Marlyn Appleby, and Chris Sexton. Ruth Welsman sank a couple of quick baskets and a free shot in the dying minutes of the game, to increase the White's lead.

High scorer was Patty Griffiths with 21 points, followed by Molly Camp 12 points, Chuckie Christensen six, Ruth Welsman five, and Mary Richardson four.

Barbara Norris was high point getter for Mac with seven points. Carolyn Graham who played a hard, steady game, had six points; Jean Ing, four; Martha Rider, two; Gwen Britt, two, and Angelina Tjellos, two.

unlikely until a much later date, in 1951.

"The Deans of the Faculties concerned, in consultation with their colleagues of the scientific departments, have carefully explored the whole situation, and arrangements are being worked out through modification of the Time Table and by other methods to accommodate all McGill students in the existing buildings during the 1950-51 session."

Tremendous Housekeeping Problems

The tremendous housekeeping problems of providing such necessities as blankets, sheets, knives, forks, spoons, when the St. John's branch on such short notice were recalled by Dr. James. These were solved through the help of the Government Departments who made available surplus stores and assisted the University in every possible way to get the College opened on time, he said.

"From 1945 to 1947 the reconstruction and reconversion of buildings and H-huts went on apace. Dormitories were provided for single students, other huts were divided to make one and two-room apartments for married students with their wives and children; recreational facilities were developed, this branch of Dawson College being in charge of Mr. Em Orlick of the Department of Athletics, Physical Education and Recreation; libraries were transferred from the Montreal campus; laboratories and drafting rooms were constructed and equipped for physical science and engineering studies.

"The adjacent No. 9 Repair Depot was taken over and several buildings there were converted. When it became apparent that Dawson College had reached the point where no more could reasonably be done, the University constructed residence for married students at Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, at a cost of over a quarter of a million dollars, with assistance from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, and also obtained Peterson Residences at Lachine, for married students and their families."

At the peak of its enrolment, Dawson College housed in January 1947 1,687 students, comprising all First Year men in Arts, Science, Commerce and Engineering and also Second Year in Science and Engineering, as well as 80 students wives and 62 children.
